

Tell'em NOW

"To the world you may be one,
But to one you may be the world."

Who is a role model for you? Who helps you?
Who do you rely on?

We all have people in our lives we appreciate and whose wisdom has helped us over the years. Yet, do they know the value they bring to you?

Tell'em now. Tell'em how they have helped you and how much you appreciate it.

Too often we don't provide the feedback. Yet, it's appreciated, and it spurs the people on to help more and to continue their good works.

Why wait? Now is the time to thank them, to share with them how they have helped you.

No, don't wait until a person's final moments on earth. Do it then, but also do it now. Is it better to have someone know how much you appreciate them and their guidance? Wouldn't you want to know and enjoy the feeling of accomplishment?

To know you have helped is to know you have not made the effort in vain. It's to know you have made a difference and accomplished something of value to another. In the telling, you will also feel great. You'll have repaid the favor of their assistance.

It's not just someone you love, it can be the boss who guides you, the co worker that helps you when you're down, or the unknown person who reaches out and provides support.

This past week I had two readers reach out to me to thank me. It helps me to realize this newsletter helps others, and that makes it worthwhile. It's always worthwhile when you know you are helping others.

Yes, Tell'em. Yes, someone may Tell you also. Let's hope so.
